

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of public airwaves can be abused for political purposes.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line and less of what we need for our democracy. Instead of something produced at "News Central" far away, it's more important that we see real people from our own communities and more substantive news about issues that matter.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard.

I am appalled by the FCC's decision to allow this clearly politically motivated use of public airwaves to happen. I beg you to reconsider your decision. If you will not prevent Sinclair from acting in this way, perhaps you will allow Senator Kerry equal time.
